

THE BOSTON MASONIC BANQUET.

Addressed by President Andrew Johnson, Hon. William H. Seward, and Rev. William S. Studley, &c.

Boston, June 25.—After the dedication ceremonies were concluded, last evening, President Johnson was escorted to Music Hall, where an immense concourse of Masons was in waiting to hear an address from Rev. Mr. Studley, of Ohio.

The distinguished members of the fraternity occupied seats on the platform, and among them were President Johnson, General Rousseau, and Grand Master Clinch, of New Brunswick.

Rev. William S. Studley, Past Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, proceeded to deliver an address of great power, research, and of peculiar interest to Masons.

After alluding to the new temple, the great benefits to the world and civilization fostered and often originated in the Order, Mr. Studley said:—

I must not forget, however, that our special errand here to-day is the activity of the West, or in the North or the South—when those great principles come up. Men that understand them can act in concert and harmony with the most circulating character of the time.

Remarks of General Rousseau and General Banks.

The next toast, "Our Country," which it was intended should be responded to by Mr. Seward, was acknowledged by General Lowell H. Rousseau, who spoke as follows:—

General—I am directed by Mr. Seward to tender his thanks to the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts for the honor of the invitation to preside at this banquet.

The President then withdrew from the platform, and was immediately surrounded by his friends.

General Banks was loudly called for, and in responding made a few brief remarks.

After alluding to the visit of the President, and the cordial welcome he had received, he said he had no religion, the people of the country should come together upon the basis of social fellowship and fraternal feeling.

To-morrow the President will visit the State House and receive the Governor and Council, after which he will visit the company of military back to his hotel and receive there by the Mayor of Charlestown.

After which he will visit the Bunker Hill Monument, the temporary junction, to remain in force until the matter can be heard, was granted by Judge Sawyer, upon plaintiff filing a bond for $500.
